INSTRUCTIONS

The DISF-M is a semi-structured interview designed to quantitatively assess the level of sexual activity and general quality of a male respondent's sexual functioning. The DISF-M is comprised of 25 items, and is scored in terms of 5 Domain Scores, a Total Sexual Functioning Score.

The time window to be used as a reference for the interview is "the past 30 days" for an initial evaluation, and "since your last visit" when the evaluation is one in a series.

The interviewer should begin the interview by putting the respondent at ease, and telling him that the interview consists of a brief series of questions about his sexual functioning. The interviewer should further suggest that although the questions focus on the details of the respondent's sexual relationship(s), which may initially make him uncomfortable, that after a few minutes most people feel much more at ease about answering the questions. It should be emphasized to the respondent that although some answers may cause mild embarrassment, it is important that he answer all questions accurately and to the best of his ability, so that a valid picture of the nature of his sexual functioning can be ascertained.

The respondent should be reminded that all information provided in the interview will be held in the strictest confidence, and that only professional staff immediately involved in his evaluation and treatment will have access to the data. The interviewer should reiterate that only through the respondent's cooperation in the interview can the accurate, detailed information necessary to a precise understanding of his condition be obtained.
